ABSTRACT

This document contains work force development learning objectives formulated from focus and DACUM (Developing a Curriculum) groups conducted by members of the professional development workgroup coordinated by the National Association of Workforce Development Professionals (NAWDP). Included are general objectives based on areas of responsibility and subobjectives on tasks identified by the groups. General objectives are considered the core skill areas for individuals in that functional area. Subobjectives are possible areas for specific skill training. Training offerings based on these objectives could address any, all, or various combinations of the subobjectives as components of the general objectives. The learning objectives cover these 10 functional areas in work force development: (1) contract management; (2) counseling and case management; (3) fiscal; (4) job development; (5) marketing; (6) management information systems; (7) monitoring; (8) supervision and management; (9) program planning and development; and (10) training and instruction. LEARNING OBJECTIVES
National Association of Workforce Development Professionals

These learning objectives cover ten functional areas in workforce development:

- ◆ Contract management
- ◆ Counseling/case management
- ◆ Fiscal
- ◆ Job development
- ◆ Marketing
- ◆ MIS
- ◆ Monitoring
- ◆ Supervision/management
- ◆ Program planning/development
- ◆ Training/instruction

The objectives were developed from focus and DACUM groups conducted by members of the professional development workgroup coordinated by the National Association of Workforce Development Professionals.

General objectives are based on areas of responsibility and subobjectives on tasks identified by the groups. General objectives are considered the core skill areas for individuals in that functional area. Subobjectives are possible areas for specific skill training. Training offerings based on these objectives might address any, all, or various combinations of the subobjectives as components of the general objectives.

These objectives may be reproduced and used without prior approval from NAWDP or any other organization. The user may identify training and/or materials as using the objectives, with a statement such as: "This workshop/course is based on learning objectives defined for [area: e.g., fiscal] staff by the National Association of Workforce Development Professionals. This does not imply endorsement or review of the training by the Association."

Organizations wishing official approval of their use of the objectives must apply to NAWDP under the review and fee requirements established by NAWDP.

The workgroup will continue working with NAWDP to revalidate and revise the objectives on a regular basis. For more information or for applications for training endorsement, contact the National Association of Workforce Development Professionals, 1620 I Street NW, Suite LL-30, Washington DC 20006, phone (202)887-6120, fax (202)887-8216.

LEARNING OBJECTIVES TRAINING/INSTRUCTION

December 1994

These learning objectives were developed from focus and DACUM groups conducted by members of the professional development workgroup coordinated by the National Association of Workforce Development Professionals. General objectives are based on areas of responsibility and subobjectives on tasks identified by the groups.

General objectives are considered the core skill areas for individuals in that functional area. Subobjectives are possible areas for specific skill training. Training offerings based on these objectives might address any, all, or various combinations of the subobjectives as components of the general objectives.

These objectives may be used without prior approval from NAWDP or any other body. The user may identify training and/or materials as using the objectives, with a statement such as: "This workshop/course is based on learning objectives defined for supervision/management staff by the National Association of Workforce Development Professionals. This does not imply endorsement or review of the training by the Association."

Organizations wishing official approval of their use of the objectives must apply to NAWDP under the review and fee requirements established by NAWDP.
